

27TH SURGICAL NURSING & NURSE EDUCATION CONFERENCE

OCTOBER 16-17, 2017 DUBAI, UAE

Future vision for maternity and newborn health nursing

Aida Abd El-Razek

Philadelphia University, Jordan

Content Outlines: The abstract includes the following content outlines: Future vision, mission of maternity and neonatal health nursing; Over all aims involving the future vision; Factors contributes to maternity nursing issues; Maternity care problems; Facing maternity problems; Advances and trends in Maternity nursing, medicine, and surgery; Education and research problems; Threats and Challenges for Nursing Education; Threats and Challenges for Nursing Research; Facing education and research problems.

Introduction: Developments in maternity nursing are taking place in the context of growing demands for accessible and affordable high-quality care, and the need for improved access to care and universal coverage (WHO 2011).

The overall aim for future plan is to:

- Provision of high quality maternity services that pregnancy is a powerful motivator for change.
- Promotes pregnancy and childbirth as an event of social and emotional significance where women and their families are managed with dignity and respect.
- Produce teaching, research and updated services for scientific, technological and academic development through application of critical thinking and advances clinical excellence, as the standard of care for women.

Biography

Aida Abd El-Razek is currently working as a Nurse Professor in Philadelphia University, Jordan

dr_aalrazek@yahoo.com

Notes: