

20TH GLOBAL NURSING EDUCATION CONFERENCE

March 21-23, 2018 | New York, USA

Toni Clayton

Southern New Hampshire University, USA

Stacey
Rosenberg

*Southern New Hampshire
University, USA*

Preparing future nurse leaders for a global environment

An opportunity exists within nursing education to prepare our students to be global citizens. Future nurse leaders need to be able to meet to global health competencies and participate in global engagement. The focus being on health equity, higher education has a responsibility to address this need. Various strategies can be employed at all levels of nursing education to prepare the students, including but not limited to study abroad. Opportunities to increase intercultural experiences, the skills and knowledge needed to provide culturally appropriate care, and the acquiring language skills. This world view will facilitate an awareness of interconnectedness and health concerns internationally.

Biography

Toni Clayton is an Associate Dean of Healthcare Administration within the Department of Nursing and Health Professions at Southern New Hampshire University. She has her expertise in Healthcare Administration and Health Sciences with a passion for developing high quality curriculum. She provides experience in program and curriculum development, faculty leadership, and accreditation support. Having worked in many healthcare environments, she has applied in-depth knowledge of healthcare delivery systems towards operational and strategic initiatives. This work includes leading Magnet status nursing teams towards the development of lean processes designed to improve the patient experience, and the delivery of quality care and services.

Stacey Rosenberg is a lead graduate nursing faculty within the Department of Nursing and Health Professions at Southern New Hampshire University. She is a Board Certified Adult Health Clinical Nurse Specialist and a Certified Nurse Educator. She has clinical experience in acute care and community/public health. She has taught both online, hybrid, and in face to face settings at the undergraduate and graduate levels. With over 18 years of teaching experience, she has extensive knowledge in curriculum and program development and accreditation. She previously served as a Coordinator of International Education, coordinating and implementing an international study abroad experience for nursing students. She serves on various committees and has presented at state, national and international conferences on the issue of global health.

Notes: