Chakras' Energy Deficiency as One of The Causes of Diabetes Type I

Introduction: Type 1 diabetes mellitus is considered an autoimmune disease according to Western medicine that is characterized by the destruction of beta cells of the pancreas responsible for the production of insulin. According to traditional Chinese medicine (TCM), diabetes is considered an energy imbalance produced by Yin deficiency and Heat retention. Purpose; to demonstrate that patients with type 1 diabetes have chakras' energy centers deficient in energy leading to deficiency of Yin and Heat retention. Methods; through two case reports of patients with type 1 diabetes that was using insulin to control glucose with no control of the glycemia. Both were submitted to Chinese dietary counseling, auricular acupuncture and apex ear bloodletting and measurement of the chakras' energy centers with radienthesia procedure. Results; both patients had chakras' energy centers completely deficient in energy, rated in one out of eight, with exception of the seven chakra, that was in normal level, rated in eight. The treatment consisted in maintaining the Chinese dietary counseling and auricular acupuncture sessions with apex ear bloodletting and associate the homeopathy medications to replenish the energy of the chakras' energy centers according to the theory Constitutional Homeopathy of the Five Elements Based on Traditional Chinese Medicine and crystal based medications for a period of one year or more. With the use of all these tools to balance the internal energy and replenish the chakras' energy centers, it was possible to reduce the use of insulin by these two patients (from the first the glycemia that was about 250 mg/dl, it became to 150mg/dl even reducing the insulin and the second patient that was about 600mg/dl, it became to 150mg/dl even reducing the insulin intake by both patients. Conclusion: the conclusion of this study is that patients with type 1 diabetes mellitus have chakras' energy deficient in energy and the treatment of this condition, replenishing the energy of the chakras' energy centers with highly diluted medications are important to treat the patient in the root level and not just treating the manifestation of the disease that is the high glycemia.
