Editorial office, Journal of Clinical Neurology and Neurosurgery, Belgium

Journal of Clinical Neurology And Neurosurgery is been running successfully till now we have proudly released 3 volumes containing Research Articles, Review Articles, Short Communication, Commentary, Case report, etc. in the year 2020, we received 50 research articles out of which 38 articles got rejected in due to various and valid reason and total 12 articles got published. We with immense pleasure say that researchers of around 40 people all around the world gave us their feedback on our paper. We received articles all around the world most of them from the Asian and European continent. Because of the heavy flow of the article, we also increased our speed by reducing the time of processing by 2 weeks. This not only helped us in better and quick issue release but also helped us in keeping the author satisfied by the speed. While speeding the process we also made sure to increase our quality of the journal. The various team was Set up to make sure the quality is maintained irrespective of speeding up the process of publication. A total of 40 reviewers were added and 30 editors were assigned to help us maintain the journal. In volume 3 and volume 4 issue 1 we discussed and learned about Schwannoma Radiosurgery, Idiopathic Adbducens Nerve Palsy, Botulinum Toxin, Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy, Multiple Sclerosis, Lumbos Arcal Radioculopathy, Tumor Resection, etc. The authors from all around gave us a new perspective to see or to view Neurological Disorders in an all-new way. The editors contributed to the Journal by sending us their editorial notes covering the topics of Neurological disorder and gave up us heads up on a topic that was trending in the field of neurosurgery. I would like to take this opportunity to thank Dr. Nan Zhang for her assistance in finalizing articles for publication and the editorial assistant, Rose Jackson, for her help in getting issues of JCNN out on time. I would also like to thank all of the writers, reviewers, the publisher, the JCNN advisory and editorial boards, and the office. The office bearers for their unwavering support in putting out yet another volume of JCNN on time, and we look forward to their continued support in bringing out Volume 4 of JCNN on time.

On behalf of the Editorial Board members, I express genuine thankfulness to all authors, reviewers, and readers of the Journal of Clinical Neurology and Neurosurgery (JCNN) in the interest of the whole publication board and the publisher. It was with the negligible co-activity, excitement, and soul of the authors and reviewers we could make JCNN a fantastic achievement. Authors have been a genuine inspiration and key in setting up JCNN among one of the best journals for publication in the subject of Nanotechnology. I express gratitude towards them all for considering and trusting JCNN as the stage for publishing their significant work. I additionally thank all authors for their caring co-activity stretched out during the different phases of processing of the articles in JCNN. For the achievement of any journal, reviewers are a fundamental part and subsequently they merit earnest appreciation. The editors greatly appreciate the contribution of reviewers who have dedicated their valuable time and efforts in reviewing the assigned manuscripts, which is crucial to the journal's editorial decision-making process.
